

Two-day Leadership TEAM OFF-SITE

The Two-day Leadership Off-site is a highly interactive, fast-paced session designed specifically for leaders and their direct reports. Leadership teams will have the opportunity to assess their organization's overall health, build team cohesiveness and identify specific actions that will maximize their advantage.

During the off-site, a leadership team will put into practice concepts outlined in Patrick Lencioni's best-selling books, The Advantage and The Five Dysfunctions of a Team. The off-site combines short lectures, working sessions and discussions that are customized for each client in order to address the four disciplines required for organizational health. Team development activities are embedded in discussions related to the client's real business issues, so participants never feel as though they are doing a touch-feely or theoretical exercise.

Facilitated by a Table Group principal consultant, a leadership team will:

- Gain a thorough understanding of the expectations and challenges in building and maintaining a cohesive team
- Assess and make immediate progress in overcoming their team's potential dysfunctions
- Review and validate the organization's direction and ensure alignment exists among the team by addressing the six critical questions required for organizational clarity
- Discuss the implications of communication and how to leverage internal communication efforts to ensure alignment throughout the organization
- Address the effectiveness of team meetings
- Identify the roadmap necessary to ensure a successful transition to a healthy organization

The Two-day Leadership Off-site is the ideal starting point for all organizational health efforts.
